SINIM (Si'nim), Land of
A country apparently impossible of identification. The prophet is declaring that the Israelite captives shall be gathered from far, "from the north and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim." It then must be to east or south, far off, and the attempts to locate it are mere guesses. The LXX has here, Persians.

SOLOMON (Sŏl'o-mon)—peaceable.
The son of David by Bath-sheba, and his successor on the throne of Israel. By the prophet Nathan he was called Jedidiah, "Beloved of Jehovah." David laid upon him the work of building the temple of Jehovah, and this task he finished in seven years. He was famous for his wonderful wisdom, was sagacious in ruling, greatly stimulated commerce, and was remarkable as a naturalist. His great error was in setting up a large harem, some of the members of which were foreigners and worshippers of idols, and for them he set up idol shrines.

STOIC (Stō'ic)
An adherent of a school of Grecian philosophers which Paul encountered at Athens. They were called Stoics because their founder, Zeno, taught for over fifty years in a stoa or porch. They were austere, cynical, and sought to be unmoved by joy or grief. They believed that the human soul is a spark or emanation of a conscious but impersonal deity, their doctrine being essentially pantheistic.

SUPHAH (Sŭ'phah).

The name occurs in a fragment taken from the "book of the Wars of Jehovah." Some would locate it somewhere among the upper valleys of the Arnon. The margin has "in storm" in place of in Suphah."

SYROPHŒNICIAN (Sÿ'ro-phŏe-nish'an).

If used with precision, the name designates a Syrian of Phœnicia in distinction from the Liby-phœnicians of north Africa. Probably, however, it simply meant a Phœnician.

Mk. 7:26. woman was a Greek, a S. by race.

SYRTIS (Syr'tis).

The name of some quicksands on the north African coast south of Sicily upon which the sailors of the ship carrying Paul were afraid it might be cast. There are two such quicksands, The Greater Syrtis, now known as the Gulf of Sidra, extending 264 miles between two promontories, and the Lesser Syrtis, called the Gulf of Cabes, extending 69 miles from the island of Kerkenna to that of Jerba.
